The Sister's Farewell.

Let us part kindly, we've journeyed together
Many a path through life's sunshine and storm;
Oh have our tears o'er the same sorrow blended,
Oh have our smiles o'er one joy brightened warm.
Haply, sometimes have our glances met coldly,
Haply kind wishes and words then were few;
But and still may have sought to enlighten
And soothe our hearts, that should beat warm and true.
Now let the Past and its faults be forgiven,
Nevermore of its bitterness dwell;
Let but Love's charity, daughter of Heaven,
Fold its white wings around friendship's farewell.
Here let us make a new covenant forever,
Banish all self from its pure trusting tone;
Chide no more harshly the sins of each other,
He shall judge all, who is perfect alone.
Stand we true to the same pleasant threshold,
Yet ere the morrow may leagues roll between;
Soon for sweet counsel and twilight communion,
Each on the other no longer shall lean.
Hope's star is bright, shall we meet ere its setting,
Gaily, or freighted with years and with we?
Still glides the future with smiling lips before us,
Feeble and faint, oh, what can we know!
Let us part kindly, then, sister and brother,
Many a barbs sink, drifting on life's main;
Hand clasped in hand, pressed each lip, more fondly
N'er may we meet on this wide earth again.
Albany, N. Y.

VARIETY.

MODERN ECONOMY OF TIME.—The Scientific American shows how time has been economized by the application of machinery.
"One man can spin more cotton-yarn now than four hundred men could have done in the same time in the year 1769, when Arkwright, the first cotton spinner, took out the first patent."
"One man can make a much finer in one day now as a hundred and fifty could a century ago."
"One woman can now make as much lace in a day as a hundred women could a hundred years ago."
"It now requires only as many days to refine sugar, as it did months thirty years ago."
"It once required six months to put quicksilver on a glass; now it needs only forty minutes."
"The engine of a first-rate iron-clad frigate will perform as much work in a day as forty two thousand horses."
A six-foot-three man went into a shop in Worcester lately, asking for "whiskers"—stockings without feet. Store had "got 'em; had got first-rate big stockings with feet. "How much?" said the customer. "Four shillings and nine pence," he was told. "Can you cut the feet off?" "Oh, certainly," "Then just do it." It was done—and so was the shop keeper, for the man took up the impromptu whiskers, laid down one and sixpence (he said he never gave any more), and was permitted to go. This is something like the London sweep who took up a piece of cloth, put it on, and asked whether a half-penny wouldn't pay for this lump of speckled stuff, and was allowed to depart with his soiled sustenance; or the little boy who stuck his finger into a pie, and holding it up, inquired, "How much for this damaged part?"
DRAWING IT STRONG.—We confess to our admiration for a forcible style of expression, but not when it comes to contempt for anything which partakes of the character of exaggeration. Our readers can therefore divine our feelings when we were listening to the following dialogue on the earthquake question:
Brown.—That was what I call a high old shock. Did you ever feel a heavier one?
Jones.—Heavier one? Lord bless you! I have been pitched out of bed, and down three flights of stairs, three times in one night, in Asia Minor.
Robinson.—Heavier one? Heaven help your innocence! Why, when I lived in Lima the people were so used to have their houses shaken down, that they thought it was unhealthy to live in one more than three months, and if the earthquake did not finish it by that time, they made it a rule to blow it up with gunpowder and build a new one. If twenty-four hours passed without an earthquake, the only way they could quiet their nerves so as to get asleep, was to go and take a knock-down shock from a galvanic battery.

GOOD-NATURED PEOPLE.—Be good natured if you can, for there is no attraction so great, no charm so admirable. A face that is full of the expression of amiability is always beautiful. It needs no paint and no powders. Cosmetics are superfluous for it. Ronge cannot improve its cheek, nor lily-white mend its complexion. Its loveliness lies beyond all this. It is not the beauty that is but skin deep. For, when you gaze into the face of a noble hearted man or woman, it is not the shape of the features you really see, nor yet the tint of the cheek, the hue of the lip, or the brilliancy of the eye; you see the noble something which animates all these, and leaves for your instinct a grateful fascination; you see an indescribable embodiment of a heartfelt goodness within, which wins your regard in spite of external appearance. Cultivate good nature, therefore. It is better than "apples of gold set in silver," for gold will take to itself wings and fly away, silver will tarnish in time, and both, when abundant, lose their comparative value; but good nature never deteriorates in worth—never abandons its possessor to the mental poverty of the malicious—never loses its hold upon the esteem of the world. It is always in fashion, and always in season. Everybody admires it. Everybody praises it. Everybody is in love with it. It never grows stale. It costs little to acquire, and nothing to keep. Yet it is beyond diamonds in its worth to its owners, and can neither be stolen or lost, however neglected. Surely this is a jewel that merits a search; and when found merits protection.
A son of the Emerald Isle, but not himself green, was taken up for he was at the time down near a rebel campment, not far from the Manassas Junction. In a word, Pat was taking a quiet nap in the shade, and was roused from his slumbers by a scouting party. He wore no special uniform of either army, but looked more like a spy than an ally, and was arrested on this.
"Who are you? What is your name, and where are you from?" were the first questions put to him by the armed party.
Pat rubbed his eyes and scratched his head, and answered—
"By my faith, gentlemen, then is ugly questions to answer, anyhow; and before I answer any of them, I'd be after axin' you, by yer lave, the same thing."
"Well," said the leader, "We are of Scott's army, and belong to Washington."
"All right," said Pat, "I know'd ye was gentlemen, for I am that same. Long live to General Scott!"
"Ah," replied the scout, "now you reason, you are our prisoner," and seized him by the shoulder.
"How is that?" inquired Pat, "are we not friends?"
"No," was the answer, "we belong to General Beauregard's army."
"Then you told me a lie, me boys, and thinking it might be so, I told you another. Now, tell me the truth, and I'll tell you the truth, too."
"Well, we belong to the State of South Carolina."
"So do I," promptly responded Pat, "and to all the States of the country."
